Myrtle's Waddle

Kim was glad her pal Myrtle was back! Myrtle hurt her ankle when she was trying to tackle an ice hurdle. Not so nimble, was she? She shuffled along the ice with a grumble.

"When will it heal?" asked Kim.

"My waddle is frazzled for now,"
Myrtle cackled.

"I will find a way to heal that flipper! I will search jungles, castles, and haggle with apple farmers. I will search near and far, Myrtle!"
Kim said.

Kim wiggled under the sea to get a little jingle jangle for her humble journey. What a noble deed to do for her pal! When she had ample cash for the road, she hustled to the next stop...the jungle.

In the jungle, she met a dimpled sloth tangled in a vine, a nimble tree frog, and a ruffled toucan.

"Do you dabble in healing a penguin waddle that can't scuttle across ice?" Kim asked.

"Hobble over to the city!" they told her.

Kim waddled into the city. She was nearly trampled by cars as they rumbled by. The people in the street frazzled her. They ruffled her feathers.

"I feel stifled here," Kim mumbled.

Something rumbled by her flipper. She almost crumbled! What was it?

The rumble came from a thing in a shop she stumbled upon. She tried a sample. It made her flippers tremble, but she was stable! She settled on a purple one with tires that could tackle the ice. This might be what Myrtle needed!

Myrtle was tickled with the purple rumble board.

"No more wobble waddle for this penguin!" Myrtle said. "I will be stable on the ice, and my ankle can heal! You are such a noble friend, Kim."

Kim sniffled. She was glad to help.
