Madge made fudge. She put it in the fridge.

"I will watch the fridge. I do not want anyone to snatch it!" she said. But she was still on edge.

Madge went to fetch the fudge from the fridge.

"I know! I will etch my name in it," Madge said to her cat.

So, she wrote M-A-D-G-E.

Then, the fudge went back into the fridge.

“This batch is my best yet. It cannot be matched!” Madge said.

All Madge could think about was winning the badge. She watched the judge fetch the badge. The badge had a one stitched on it.

The next day, Madge went to the fridge. The fridge was not latched.

“That is odd. I know I latched it!” Madge said.

Her cat dodged off.

As Madge fetched the batch,
she saw only a smidge was left.

“No!” Madge yelled. “I will catch who did this!”

Then, she saw Mitch with fudge all over his face.

“Did you take my fudge?”
Madge asked.

Mitch felt bad. “I pledge to help you make another batch. Your next batch will win a badge!”
he said.
