One hot day, Snail left a trail on the grains of sand. He was looking for his pal, Crab, so they could play.

The rays of sun were hot, but Snail knew he would not fail.

Not far away, Crab was making a trail on the grains of sand. He saw Snail, and he held his claws way up in excitement! He had been waiting to play with Snail.

As Snail and Crab trailed to the water, a bird sailed in the sky. Crab called out from the mainland.

“Don’t be afraid! You may play with us too!”

“No playtime for me!” The bird explained that he did not want to play. “You are a plain crab, but you will be my lunch today,” the bird said.

“No way!” Crab went to the water and didn’t stray from the trail. He was afraid to be the bird’s bait.

Crab made its way to the water!
The bird swayed along until he saw Snail.

"A snail will be yummy bait for me."

Snail saw the bird aim for him.
It was a strain for him to get across the grains of sand!

The bird did not delay. He didn't sway as he took aim at Snail.

Snail did not strain any longer!
He knew he could make his way to the water.

Just then, a wave pulled Snail in. He was safe! He wouldn't be bait for the bird today! Maybe now he could play with Crab.
