Flutter Bird wasn't like other birds in the fir forest. When they sang, their songs were filled with chirps.

When it was Flutter Bird's turn to burst into song, out came a whirl of glitter!

At first, Flutter Bird loved the burst of pink and purple her songs made. But after the third time, the other birds turned from her. They said she was not like them, and she could not chirp with them.

Flutter Bird was hurt. She wanted to perform her songs and chirp with a band of birds.

She went to visit her pal, Yura. She asked Yura to help her get the other birds to let her chirp with them.

Yura was surprised.

In a firm tone, she said, "Flutter Bird, don't let those other birds curb your hope. Your song is grand! I urge you to not stop working. You will return in a band of birds!"

Flutter Bird felt better. She had a thirst for music!

"Yura, you have helped me see that I shouldn't hide my gift," Flutter Bird chirped. "Further, it is not a burden now. I'm no longer hurt."

Flutter Bird kept working.

She started performing again with a bigger blur of swirling glitter!

Some of the glitter twirled on to Yura's shirt and fur! The rest of it lit up Flutter Bird like a shining star!

Flutter Bird loves her glitter now.
She formed a band with birds who love her whirls of glitter.

Flutter Bird's band sings as she bursts with swirls of purple glitter.
The fun returns to the forest
every day!
