Let me tell you the story about how I went numb when I knocked over Mom's glass gnome. If only I knew to be more careful. Boy, was I wrong and careless.

I was really bored and stuck at home. I knew I wasn't actually allowed to play frisbee inside. Mom had even thoughtfully written it on a sign.

The boredom was gnawing at me and Mom was busy watering the sunflowers in the backyard. I know you're thinking... "What a knucklehead!" Shamefully, I agree.

No frisbees
inside!

It was heartless to play frisbee inside and I knew I was being thoughtless. I went out on a limb thinking there was enough space for me to not wreck anything or knock anything meaningful over. Silly me.

I didn't want to wreck anything,
but the boredom was making me
numb. I knelt down on one knee and quickly threw the frisbee. All it did was weakly hit the doorknob
and fall sadly to the floor.

Confidently, I thought, "I can do better than that!"

I quickly climbed onto the couch and knew instantly that I was doing something wrong. Sometimes, I have a knack for getting in trouble. But I happily and tightly gripped the frisbee with my thumb, drew my limb back forcefully, and threw the frisbee!

Drawing my wrist back swiftly with the frisbee, I hit Mom's fragile gnome. I knocked it onto the ground! Little pieces the size of crumbs were everywhere. I was instantly regretful!

"Oh, Rob! You know I loved that gnome," Mom said sadly.

I gnawed on my lip nervously. I knew I had made a mistake and now I knew better. I went to my room and wrote Mom a note to say sorry for my wrongdoing.
