Myrtle wanted something different for lunch. Everything at school was made of noodles – noodles in butter, noodle soup, tuna and noodles.

Mom was able to give Myrtle sunbutter, strawberry jelly, and ample apples to pick from. Those would be perfect.

Myrtle cut her sandwich into little triangle shapes, and her apple into triangles. Now all she needed was a lunchbox.

Mom loved to haggle at yard sales. She had gotten Myrtle a new lunchbox and water bottle. They were on the mantle.

Myrtle's day was going well until she saw that she forgot her doodle for art class.

At lunch, her friends said, "Settle down."

As Myrtle fiddled with her sparkled lunchbox, it popped open. Nestled inside was her doodle. She was puzzled!

The next day, Myrtle had P.E. class. It was track day. Jumping over hurdles rattled her. She thought her ankles were too thin. Plus, she was not able to find her purple shoelaces.

Myrtle rustled in her backpack for her P.E. clothes. Her lunchbox popped open. Inside were new purple shoelaces. Myrtle was baffled!

On Wednesday, noises trickled out of Myrtle's backpack.

Myrtle wore her goggles and put her bag on the table. She opened the buckle on her lunchbox. A frog jumped out!

Ms. Siddle hustled over. She thanked Myrtle. She was tickled because a frog was part of the lesson.

On Thursday, they were not able to have P.E.! What would they play? What a pickle!

"Does your lunchbox have a fix?" asked Lisle. "Maybe some marbles?"

Myrtle mumbled. "No, just my empty bottle."

"Check again," said Sable.

Myrtle wiggled the clasp. The lunchbox opened without any trouble.

"Wiffle balls!" giggled the girls.

"Recess is saved!"
