Paul loved awesome books! He saw he was reading more than riding his awesome BMX bike!

Books used to cause him to yawn. Now, he caught himself wanting to be an author.

Writing made him feel alive, like riding his bike, which was awesome!

One awful day in August, Paul went to the library to find some books.

When he paused to think how he would haul all the books, he saw the sign.

It caused his jaw to drop!

CITY LIBRARY

Paul stood in awe. He read the sign again like a hawk.

"Become an Author! Submit your book to the Autumn Writer's Contest by August 30th. The winning book will be printed this fall by the Raw Writers Co."

Paul went fast on his jaunt home.

Writing was hard. Papers with his scrawls covered the floor.

Yawning, Paul said he could not start. Mom told him to call Aubree because she edits books in Austin.

Aubree told Paul the best books she saw were the ones that could draw you in. It was because authors shared things they loved.

A new idea dawned on Paul for the book he wanted to write.

Paul finished his book. Now, he could pause to find any flaws.

On the day of the contest, he read, "BMX Vault: From Bunny Hops to Bar Rides."

Everyone applauded. Paul won!

Paul thanked Aubree for the lesson she had taught him.

Paul saw he was an author now.
His book was going to cause a lot of awesome kids to start riding.
