Treacy is a giraffe who loves food!

One night, Treacy was having an odd dream. In it, he saw something as it leapt down the hall. It was singing,

"It's so great,
it's a pleasure.
Treacy's bread
is such a treasure!"

Treacy woke up in a sweat.

"What a dream!" he said.

He leapt from his feather bed.

"What time is it? Oh! It's a great time for breakfast! I will make steak and eggs for breakfast!"

Treacy read about how to make a steak. He spread butter in the pan and cooked his steak and eggs.

"Mmm, that was great!" Treacy said.

But Treacy was still hungry.

"I'll eat something healthy," he said.

He munched on a head of lettuce and some bread. But Treacy was STILL hungry!

So Treacy grabbed his leather bag and leapt outside to walk to the market.

At the market, Treacy saw a book about bread. He looked at the bread book. There was a page with a picture of a bread called leavened bread.

"I will make this bread!" said Treacy.

Treacy walked home to get ready to bake the leavened bread. Treacy called his pals, Monkey and Camel. He told them to come over for some fresh bread.

"I will bake the leavened bread and break it into small slices. And we can drink healthy juice," Treacy said. "This will be great!"

He baked the bread, put on his best sweater, and waited for his pals.

BREAD

Treacy, Monkey, and Camel spread their leavened bread with butter.
They ate the leavened bread until they were out of breath! It was great!

Then, Treacy said good night to his pals.

And as they leapt down the hall, Treacy noticed them singing, "It's so great, it's a pleasure! Treacy's bread is such a treasure!"
